

Story of Cinderella

Cinderella's father marries a new wife after her mother has died, the new wife has two spoiled daughters. Eventually Cinderella's father dies and the step mother and step sisters enslave Cinderella as their scullery maid. Over the years she makes friends with mice. There is a big ball coming up for the prince to find a wife, and Cinderella wants to go, the stepmother only allows her to go if she finishes all of her chores. The whole time since she has known about the ball the mice and her have been working on a dress for the ball. So she finishes her chores and goes to meet her stepsisters and stepmother at the door and when she gets there they are jealous and rip up her dress. She runs outside and cries. All of the sudden her fairy godmother shows up and turns her ragged dress into a beautiful one, she turns her shoes into glass slippers and a pumpkin into a carriage, and the mice are the coachmen. She tells her all of this will change back at midnight, so she goes to the ball and dances with the prince. She runs out at midnight and loses a shoe on the way out. After they get out of eye distance the carriage and coachmen turn back into a pumpkin and mice and the dress turns back into the ragged one. The Prince finds the shoe and goes to every house to find the girl who wore that shoe, when the stepmother learns of this she locks Cinderella in her room, so when the prince comes she will not be able to try the shoe on. The mice get the key while the sisters are trying the shoe on and unlock her door she comes down puts the shoe on and it fits her perfectly. The prince and her get married and they live happily ever after.
